

WOMEN BEHIND THE BARS

It seems to the follower of Yemeni female prisoners' stories that there are interesting and compassion-provoking stories .

And may get suberized, as there are many female prisoners in grievance behind the bars forced into crime while others criminal.

Many who committed crimes by mistake and some involved because of the oppression of men to face the fate of prison and denial.

Others behind bars are not really criminals however been taken advantage of by men , like the the prisoner X.

She was stealing because of her husband, who was an alcoholic. He pushed her to the crime of robbery. Her story is full of pain and suffering. She is languishing behind bars with her two young daughters who didn't find safety and protection with their addict father, and non-else. The had no option but live ten years in jail. Two young girls were forced to live in prison with their mother as no safe shelter but prison.

The have been deprived of freedom, childhood ,and the basic things, though being well-mannered. The both girls are aged between 16 and 17 years old.

One million and two hundred thousand was the amount that should be paid on the female prisoner to have their freedom again.

This amount of money was impossible for the female prisoner to be accessed

Here, success story in the history of the National Prisoner Foundation achieved and for its funders. After ten years of imprisonment, the female prisoner enjoyed her freedom again with her two young daughters. During those elapsed years, the mother returned to her senses and learned that blind obedience entails accountability and pledged not to repeat such wrong acts. NPF assisted this female prisoner with her daughters under its projects helping them to restore liberty and their normal life.

Another dazzling story in prisons that provokes surprise

Women engaged in theft and participated in killing someone to access money. The defendant ( X), charged with criminal case in partnership with five people. She tried to steal a house of which the owner tried to stop the robbery. The owner had been muted until he died.

The female prisoner who got involved in the crime was jailed at time she had a five- month baby child.

The baby grew up away from her mother until she was nine years old. Her mother still languishing behind bars since the Court sentenced her to five years ' imprisonment with payment of blood money of five million five hundred thousand.

As the female prisoner who lost hope to see again her child and the day light, lost hope in her family, and any other source of support , she decided to get rid of her pain through committing suicide. Fortunately, she was rescued by female prisoners. National Prisoner Foundation once get to know about her case acted immediately to assist her retaining hope for the prisoner, her family as well as her child adding another success to NPF credit.
